

METHOD AND APPARATUS FOR MANAGING SYSTEM RESOURCES USING A CONTAINER MODEL

Abstract

A method for managing system resources including creating a container, wherein creating the container comprises allocating a first portion of a first resource to the container, associating the container with a resource pool, wherein the resource pool is associated with the first resource, determining whether the first portion of the first resource is valid, and activating the container if the first portion of the first resource is valid.

64545_3